

Energy & Resources Industry in Latin America

Integrated solutions

Our industry practice

For more than 100 years Deloitte has provided a highly skilled team of professionals to serve the Energy & Resources industry. Our work with a broad client portfolio in all sectors has provided us with a wealth of experience in upstream, midstream and downstream petroleum and gas operations, in addition to the mining, electricity and water utility industry.

By offering regional coordination in which all our participating countries operate as one office, we have access to a global network of resources that leverage a multidisciplinary approach. This enables us to call upon specialists from other disciplines in accordance with the need of particular clients.

The Energy & Resources industry challenges

The Energy & Resources industry has always faced important challenges and risks that will continue to impact global trends in the near future, including: balancing energy supply and demand; security of supply; hydrocarbon and energy prices; environmental and climate change regulations; operational efficiency; mergers and acquisitions; investments in renewable energy, generation capacity and exploration; increased scrutiny of corporate governance practices; as well as attracting, developing and retaining talent. All these issues make the processes of managing risk and creating value for stakeholders more complex and challenging.

A core team of over 2000 professionals from different disciplines and countries works together to provide business advisory and integrated solutions to our clients. We deliver services in four professional areas: audit and risk management, tax, consulting and corporate finance.
