

1. Allocate two roles to undertake an assessment - authors and reviewers.

2. Authors are presented with a series of yes/no questions mapped to climate risk regulation relevant to your business and in your geographic location.

3. Reviewers will then audit each answer. They can either approve the answers and associated evidence or flag them for revision before generating time-stamped reports.

4. Status reporting can either present the complete list of answers or summary results, including progress updates and peer comparisons.
