Deloitte Belgium sets up its new Liège regional office at Paradis Express Boverie

Located close to the heart of Liège and the Guillemins railway station in a near-zero energy building, the new offices are part of Deloitte's wider strategy of sustainability, digitalization and new ways of working - themes that are more than ever on the agenda for clients and employees.

In mid-May, Deloitte moved its offices in Liege to the Paradis Express site, which enjoys a unique location in the heart of the "Cité Ardente" and is helping to revitalize the rapidly growing Guillemins district. Vincent Trevisan, Partner of Deloitte Private: "The proximity of our new offices to entrepreneurs enables us to strengthen our position as a trusted advisor by providing accounting and advisory services in tax, employment law, corporate law, finance, mergers and acquisitions and strategy. With this new location, we remain even closer to local entrepreneurs and their families."

Built for the future

The new Deloitte office will reflect the new way of (tele)working, and will serve as a meeting place for employees and clients rather than a permanent workplace. The office will make it possible for employees and their clients to be present both physically and virtually thanks to flexible workstations, areas equipped with video technology and individual booths for making calls or holding meetings in pairs.

The offices meet the highest standards of quality, innovation and environmental performance, providing a collaborative, friendly and inspiring space for employees and their clients.

With these new offices, Deloitte is focusing on mobility connectivity, -on employee and client well-being by offering more flexible work options and locations, and on attracting new talent, inviting them to choose Deloitte as a sustainable and innovative employer.

A truly sustainable workplace

The new building meets Q-ZEN building standards (near zero energy) and is fully accessible by public transport. Charging stations for electric cars and bikes also encourage other forms of sustainable transport.

"As a major employer in Belgium, we have a responsibility and an opportunity to make a positive contribution to a more sustainable world, and we know that we can't maintain our leadership position without

"making this a priority," says Piet Vandendriessche, CEO of Deloitte. "The new office in Liège is part of this sustainability strategy and pursues Deloitte's goal of achieving net zero emissions by 2030."

The new Deloitte office in Liege is located at Rue Jean Gol n°2.
