and global trade management

“Supporting your international trade activities while remaining compliant with the constantly changing regulatory environment”

Your customs and global trade related activities and potential queries or issues

Have you ever faced the prospect of a situation like any of the below?

An NCTS-declaration for destination Hungary has not been cleared – yet you know that the truck driver has made the delivery. In your capacity as the declarant, you will be held liable for the import duties and import VAT due.

You import textiles from Bangladesh. Upon a retrospective check of the Form A, it turns out that the origin is not correct. On the basis of the enclosed transport and other documents, customs concludes that the goods are of Chinese origin. Customs recovers from you these import duties due and imposes a fine which may be equal to the value of the products or more.

You import equipment for digital television using a zero rate. After a physical check of the goods, customs charges you additional taxes of 14 %.

You import, in good faith, a container from China on behalf of your client that you believe to contain porcelain. Unfortunately, when the container is opened, it is full of cigarettes. You, as the declarant, receive an additional tax bill of 1.000.000 euro.

You could be confronted by a range of different customs and global trade queries or risks on a daily basis. As such matters become ever-more complex, it is hard to find the right answer without profound expertise in the area, in due time. The management of your customs and global trade activities indeed requires a day-to-day monitoring and dedicated resources with in-depth expertise.

You have neither the time nor the resources to handle?

- You lack qualified resources.
- Your customs specialist is due to retire soon and you are seeking for succession.
- Your customs specialist has dropped out temporarily due to e.g. sickness or pregnancy and you are looking for support to fulfill your compliance obligations.
- You've started an internal project and look for qualified support to run the project.
- Your business is booming and your customs and global trade staff is face a high workload and things get delayed.

Deloitte has a solution for you: "Customs and global trade co/outsourcing".

Your company will no longer need to put the questions from the authorities on the shoulders of one or more employees – who might or might not have the right experience or sufficient time to stay on top of the job.

Instead, dedicated Deloitte experts can be assigned to handle your customs and global trade queries or support your activities, removing the burden from your employees who can instead devote themselves to their own core activities.
