

Important tax changes for online retailers selling goods into Australia and the EU

23 May 2018 | Gateway building, Zaventem

10:00 am - 12:00 pm CET

Free of charge

Information Session

As you might be aware an important change for online retailers selling goods into Australia will come into force on July 2018. At the same time, ECOFIN has adopted a proposal that might radically change the indirect tax landscape applicable to cross-border e-commerce in the EU.

Deloitte Belgium is hosting an information session in our offices in Zaventem on 23 May 2018 together with a delegation of the Australian tax office, during which two of the ATO's senior technical experts will speak about the goods and services tax (GST) law changes that apply from 1 July 2018 to low value imported goods sold to consumers in Australia.

The ATO are interested in speaking with business to provide practical information about the Australian law. This is a great opportunity to meet with them, and talk about the law changes and ask questions.

The focus

The ATO will cover key elements of the changes including:

- Defining low value imported goods
- How this affects suppliers and deemed suppliers for GST purposes
- The rules relating to consumer and business purchases
- Invoicing and customs information
- Registration, returns and payments
- The compliance approach of the ATO

ATO Experts

Adrian Preston Loh - Assistant Commissioner,
Indirect Tax - Internationals Strategy

Ian Ayrton - Project Manager, GST on low value
imported goods

What about the EU proposals?

Deloitte will give a short update on the latest news regarding the proposed changes on distance sales of goods imported from third territories or third countries (non-EU), and the proposed liability for marketplaces on B2C supplies of imported goods or by non-EU vendors.
