COVID-19 | Belgian social security authorities' "no-impact position" extended

Given the persistent COVID-19 crisis and its several – even long-term – consequences in terms of working patterns, the Belgian social security authorities have decided to extend their "no-impact" position in view of determining the applicable social security legislation up till June 30, 2021.

Such extension allows companies and workers to better tackle possible social security effects generated by the pandemic, while waiting for more stable times to come.

In concrete terms, it means that changes in the work pattern resulting from the COVID-19 restriction measures, such as e.g. increased work time spent in the residence country, not being the usual country of employment, shall not impact the applicable social security legislation.

You can also find more detailed information as to the broader social security impact of the COVID-19 measures in our April News alert (Link).
