The new CO₂ emission reference applying as of 2016 for calculating the benefit in kind of a company car's private use has been published. This applies to company cars in the hands of employees and company directors.

For a company car's private use, the benefit in kind is calculated based on the car's gross list price and its CO₂ emission.

The following CO₂ emission reference will apply as from 1 January 2016:

- Petrol, LPG, or natural gas cars: 107 g/km (instead of 110 g/km for 2015)
- Diesel cars: 89 g/km (instead of 91g/km for 2015)

The minimum amount to consider as benefit in kind for income year 2016 has not yet been published for income year 2016.

The above CO₂ emission reference and the corresponding benefit in kind is to be processed as of the January payroll. The new reference figures will slightly increase the taxable benefit in kind in income year 2016 compared to income year 2015.
