Lithuania

The draft law amending and supplementing the Lithuanian Labour Code was registered

On 22 January, the draft law amending and supplementing the Lithuanian Labour Code was registered. The main aim of the aforementioned draft law is to impose the obligation to the employers to indicate the salary in the job advertisement.

The above-mentioned draft law aims to enhance the social responsibility and strengthen employees' negotiating power.

On 1 January the Law on Protection of Whistle-blowers entered into force

On 1 January the Law on Protection of Whistle-blowers entered into force with the aim to strengthen the whistle-blowers protection in Lithuania.

The law will apply to both public and private sectors and aims at creating conditions for individuals to provide information confidentially about the suspected infringement and to avoid negative consequences related to whistleblowing. Lithuania has undertaken to adopt the afore-mentioned law with the aim of becoming the member state of the Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development (OECD).
