Brexit Survey: Expectations and preparations of German enterprises

June 2020
This edition
We have arrived at the half-way point in the Brexit transition period – yet there is still a great deal of uncertainty among businesses about the exact kind of relationship the UK and the European Union will have once this period ends in December 2020.

In the latest edition of our series entitled “Brexit Survey: Expectations and Preparations of German enterprises”, we joined forces with the Federation of German Industries (BDI) to analyze how Brexit and the Brexit process will impact the future of German enterprises.

We focus on how companies assess the implications, risks and opportunities of Brexit, both for Germany as a business location and for the enterprises themselves. We also look at their take on the outcome of the Brexit negotiations and the potential political consequences.

A survey of 248 large-scale German enterprises with business ties to the United Kingdom, which we conducted between 19 and 29 May 2020 forms the basis of our analysis.
Executive Summary

Brexit negotiations

• Possible outcomes: 30 percent of respondents believe the negotiations will result in a no-FTA Brexit, while a quarter of the companies surveyed felt an extension to the transition period or a free trade agreement was the likeliest outcome. A majority cited the EU demands for a level playing field as the biggest source of controversy in the negotiations.

• Post-Brexit Europe: Our survey respondents indicated that they favor deepening European integration, with the caveat that further integration should be focused on specific policy areas rather than across-the-board centralization.

Brexit and Germany as a location for business

• Opportunities: As a location for business, respondents say Germany stands to benefit from strengthening its position as a financial center (54%) and through attracting business relocations (49%).

• Risks: According to respondents, the greatest risks Brexit poses for Germany as a location for business are the collapse of the European Union (45%) and a decline in trade with the United Kingdom (40%). 30 percent say a hard Brexit would mean layoffs for their business in Germany.

Brexit strategies for German enterprises

• The Corona crisis and the run-up to Brexit: Around one third of enterprises say they have either postponed or scaled back their Brexit initiatives due to the pandemic.

• Projected impact: Although approximately three quarters of respondents feel they are well-prepared for Brexit, 40 percent say they nevertheless expect a significant negative impact from Brexit. The banking industry is expecting the biggest hit, while the automotive enterprises in our survey feel they are best prepared.
