Running the risk intelligent enterprise™

Gibraltar

By “building it in” rather than “bolting it on”, Risk Intelligent Enterprise Management allows an organisation to be both more resilient in dealing with adversity and more agile in pursuing opportunity.

Embedding risk into decision making

Risk has never been a hotter topic than it is today. In an age of extraordinary uncertainty and turbulence, when scandals and disasters are daily front-page news, no one – and no enterprise – is immune to the potential impact of unexpected events. Executives and boards are expressing extremely high interest in proven methods to manage risk more effectively, and many are searching for ways to address key questions about risk that more and more are coming to the forefront of their consciousness.

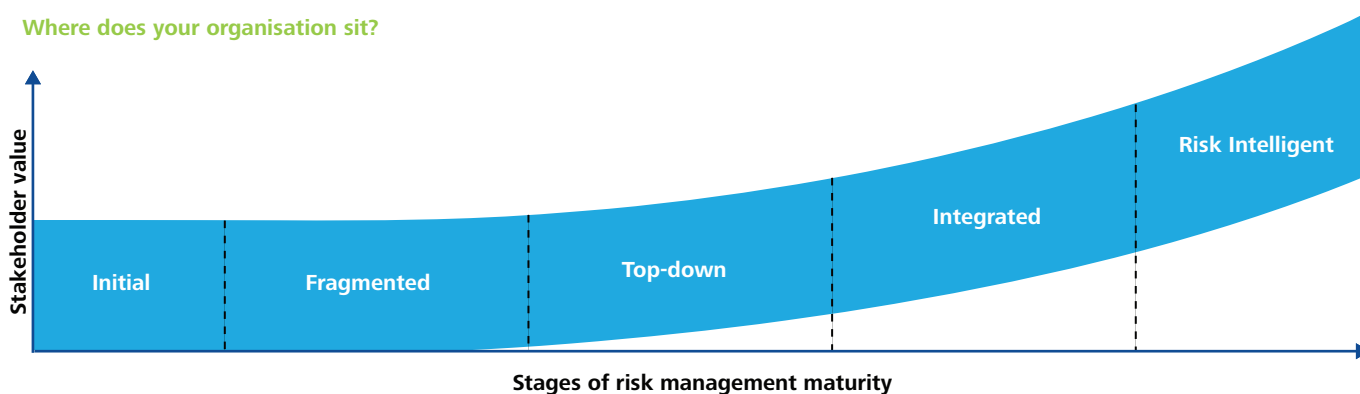

“How prepared is our enterprise for the opportunities and risks that lie ahead? How can we prepare for the unexpected before it happens? How do we effectively link strategy and risk management?”

We believe that executives and boards can find answers to such questions by practicing Risk Intelligent Enterprise Management – an approach that considers risk as a key input into leadership decisions as opposed to an outcome to be managed after the fact.

Build on what you already have

The good news for most organisations is that they’re likely to already have many of the elements of Risk Intelligent Enterprise Management in place. The path forward should be much more a matter of building on what currently exists, rather than starting from scratch. For this reason, we think it’s important for organisations to take stock of their current risk management capabilities before making major changes or investments in risk management.
