Investment basics:

Currency – Russian rouble (RUB)

Foreign exchange control – Certain exchange control restrictions apply to Russian residents (including Russian citizens and legal entities) and to foreign currency transactions. There are no restrictions on the distribution of profits to a nonresident entity but residents must provide the authorized bank with the documents confirming the decision to distribute the profits. Residents and nonresidents may hold bank accounts in any currency.

All Russian citizens and foreign holders of Russian residence permits are considered Russian “currency control residents” and are required to notify the tax authorities when an account is opened, changed, or closed with a foreign bank or other foreign financial market organization, and also are required to report cash flows on an annual basis. The use of foreign bank accounts by Russian currency control residents is restricted, and all transactions made via foreign bank accounts must be in line with Russian law.

Individuals who have spent more than 183 days outside Russia in a calendar year are exempt from the reporting requirement. It is unclear whether they also are exempt from the restrictions on the use of foreign bank accounts.

As from 1 January 2020, resident individuals are exempt from the obligation to submit reports on cash flows on foreign accounts (including deposits), when the following criteria are met:

- The account is held with a bank/other financial institution in a Eurasian Economic Union (EAEU) member state, or a jurisdiction that exchanges financial information with Russia and is included on the list issued by the Federal Tax Service; and
- The total amount credited to or debited from the account in a reporting year does not exceed RUB 600,000, or the balance of the account does not exceed RUB 600,000, provided that no additional funds were credited to the account during the reporting year.

Russian residents (both individuals and legal entities) must repatriate all income derived from foreign trade contracts and loans provided to nonresidents, and deposit the full amount in an account in Russia. Legal entities who fail to do so are subject to a fine of between 75% and 100% of the amount not repatriated.
The fine for individuals has yet to be announced. The repatriation requirements do not apply to contracts with nonresidents that are denominated and settled in RUB.

Depending on the type of goods sold to a nonresident under an international contract, the repatriation requirements are being phased out either progressively (until 1 January 2024) or immediately (as from 1 January 2020). The progressive abolition of the requirements applies to certain codes of goods as per the unified EAEU Commodity Nomenclature of Foreign Economic Activity (e.g., coal, natural gas, quartz, crude oil, fine pearls, diamonds, etc.).

Accounting principles/financial statements – Russian accounting standards apply and financial statements generally must be prepared annually. The reporting year is the calendar year.

The following companies must prepare consolidated financial statements under IFRS: companies whose securities are traded on a stock exchange, banks, insurance companies, non-state pension funds, management companies of investment funds, investment unit trusts, clearing companies, federal state-owned and joint stock companies the shares of which are federal property (as per the list approved by the government), and any other companies that prepare consolidated financial statements as required by the law or their registration documents. This requirement is in addition to standalone statements prepared under Russian accounting standards/IAS. Annual consolidated IFRS financial statements must be audited, presented to shareholders, and filed with the Central Bank.

The reporting year for purposes of the IFRS consolidated financial statements can be a year other than a calendar year, but a decision to use a different year must be specifically documented in the entity’s articles of association. Certain types of entities are not eligible, including banks, insurance and clearing companies, non-state pension and investment funds, certain state-owned companies, and other companies that are required to include their IFRS consolidated financial statements in the annual report.

Principal business entities – These are the public and nonpublic joint stock company, limited liability company, and partnership. Other forms of business include sole proprietorship, and a branch, representative office, or other separate subdivision of a foreign entity.

Residence – An entity is a Russian resident if it is incorporated in Russia, if its actual place of management is in Russia (unless otherwise provided for by an applicable tax treaty), or if it is deemed to be a Russian resident under an applicable tax treaty.

Basis – Russian tax residents are taxed on worldwide income; foreign entities are taxed on income from commercial activities undertaken in Russia, and on passive income from Russian sources. Income received by branches is taxed in a similar way to income received by subsidiaries, but with certain exceptions.

Taxable income – Profit tax is imposed on a company's profits, which consist of business/trading income, passive income and capital gains. Normal business expenses may be deducted in calculating profits, provided they are economically justified, incurred in the generation of income, and supported by adequate documentation.
Rate – The corporate tax rate of 20% is a combined federal and regional rate. For the period 2017 to 2024, 3% is payable to the federal budget and 17% is payable to the regional budget. The regional rate may be reduced by the local authorities for certain categories of taxpayer (e.g., Russian entities that are recognized tax residents of special economic zones, participants in regional investment projects, etc.).

Surtax – There is no surtax.

Alternative minimum tax – There is no alternative minimum tax.

Taxation of dividends – Dividends received by a Russian entity from Russian and foreign entities generally are subject to tax at a rate of 13% (but see “Participation exemption,” below). For domestic dividends, the tax generally is withheld at source by the Russian payer acting as a tax agent.

Capital gains – Capital gains are taxed as ordinary income at the normal corporate rate (but see “Participation exemption,” below).

Losses – Losses (except for losses derived from activities subject to a 0% profit tax rate) may be carried forward for an unlimited period but cannot exceed a cap (for 2017-2021, the cap is 50% of the tax base of the current period). The carryback of losses is not permitted.

Foreign tax relief – Foreign tax paid may be credited against Russian tax on the same profits, but the credit is limited to the amount of Russian tax payable on the foreign income.

Participation exemption – To qualify for the participation exemption for dividends, a Russian company must hold a participation of at least 50% for an uninterrupted period of at least 365 days. Foreign entities redomiciled in Russia and qualifying for “international holding company” status must hold a participation of at least 15% for an uninterrupted period of at least 365 days to qualify for the participation exemption for dividends. A foreign investee must not be resident in a "black list" jurisdiction.

As from 2019, a participation exemption is available for capital gains received starting from 2018 derived from the sale of (i) unlisted shares or participations in Russian companies, and (ii) shares in Russian companies held for more than five years, provided that no more than 50% of the companies’ directly or indirectly held assets comprise real estate property located in Russia.

A participation exemption also is available for capital gains on the sale of listed shares in high-technology Russian companies (and, until 2023, listed bonds of Russian companies and listed investment units that are considered high-technology) acquired after 1 January 2011 and that are held for more than one year.

An extended participation exemption for capital gains applies for international holding companies. The exemption is available on the sale of participations in Russian and foreign companies. The exemption is subject to the following conditions: (i) the participation must be held for an uninterrupted period of at least 365 days; (ii) the shares disposed of must represent at least 15% of the share capital of the company; (iii) the assets of the company whose shares are disposed of must not comprise more than 50% of Russian real estate; and (iv) the shares disposed of initially must have been acquired other than via a capital contribution, or as a result of a reorganization in the period of 365 days before to 365 days after the date of registration of the company as an international holding company.

Holding company regime – Foreign legal entities registered in Russia are treated as international companies (or “international foundations”) and are subject to the general tax regime applied to Russian companies but with certain tax benefits for international companies that qualify as international holding companies (see “Participation exemption”, above).

Incentives – Various types of tax incentive are available, such as a reduction in the profit tax rate to 15.5% (from the standard 20% tax rate), a property tax exemption, and other benefits for investment projects in many regions. An investment tax deduction is available in certain regions in the form of a reduction in profit tax equal to the amount of qualified capital expenditure (specific requirements vary from region to region). Special tax regimes (e.g., regional investment projects, special investment contracts, or “territories of advanced social and economic growth”) grant a 0% profit tax rate, property tax reduction, and other benefits. Companies that participate in the Skolkovo Innovation Center may benefit from a 10-year tax holiday. A 0% profit tax rate applies to a range of educational and medical services. A 150% deduction for profit tax purposes is available to all companies with qualifying R&D expenditure. Technology and software companies may benefit from reduced social security rates.

Compliance for corporations:

Tax year – Calendar year.

Consolidated returns – Russian companies forming a group with 90% (or more) direct or indirect ownership may file a consolidated corporate income tax return for the preceding calendar year if total tax payments exceeded RUB 10 billion, and revenue and assets exceeded RUB 100 billion and RUB 300 billion, respectively, calculated according to Russian accounting standards.

Taxpayers electing to file a consolidated group return must continue to file as a consolidated group for at least five years.

Filing and payment – The annual profit tax return must be filed by 28 March after the end of the previous tax year.

Penalties – Penalties generally are 20% of the relevant tax (or 40% if the default is intentional), plus late payment interest and fixed penalties. Criminal penalties also may apply.

Rulings – Opinions of the tax authorities may be granted to large taxpayers within the “horizontal tax monitoring” procedure and generally are binding. A taxpayer may challenge the tax authorities’ opinion under the mutual agreement procedure in an applicable tax treaty.

Large taxpayers also may obtain an advance pricing agreement under the transfer pricing rules.

Residence – An individual is resident if he/she spends 183 days or more in Russia during a calendar year.

Basis – Russian residents are taxed on their worldwide income. Nonresidents are taxed only on Russian-source income.

Taxable income – Taxable income consists of any receipt (in cash or in kind) by an individual or that is subject to an individual’s discretionary disposal, subject to certain exceptions. In most cases, profits earned from self-employment activities are calculated under the same rules as profits derived by companies.
Rates – A flat rate of 13% applies to Russian residents on most types of income, and a 30% rate applies to Russian-source income of nonresidents, unless the rate is reduced under a tax treaty (see also under “Withholding taxes,” below).

Dividends are taxed at a rate of 13% for residents and 15% for nonresidents, unless the rate is reduced under a tax treaty.

A 30% withholding tax may apply to certain income from securities if the relevant information is not disclosed to the tax agent (see “Disclosure requirements” under “Anti-avoidance rules,” below).

The employment income (base salary, bonus, and vacation payments) of highly qualified foreign professionals paid under a contract of employment with a Russian entity is taxable at a rate of 13% (even during periods of nonresidence for tax purposes), rather than the 30% rate that otherwise would apply.

Deemed income of Russian tax residents from beneficial loans (i.e., where the interest rate on loans made in foreign currency is lower than 9% or lower than 2/3 of the Central Bank’s key rate for RUB loans) received from affiliates is taxed at a 35% rate.

Capital gains – Income derived from the sale of shares of a Russian company, unlisted stock in a Russian company or listed stock in a high-technology Russian company is exempt where the shares are acquired after 1 January 2011 and held for more than five years. Gains from the sale of other types of property, except for immovable property, are exempt after a three-year holding period; otherwise, they are subject to tax at 13%, subject to relief for certain expenses (see under “Deductions and allowances,” below). A five-year holding period applies to immovable property that is acquired as from 1 January 2016.

Gains arising to nonresidents from the sale of Russian property are subject to tax at 30%.

Special rules apply for income derived from transactions with securities issued by Russian entities and delivered by depositaries to foreign entities acting on behalf of an individual.

Deductions and allowances – Subject to certain restrictions, resident taxpayers may be able to claim tax deductions related to property and investments (in securities and in personal investment accounts), charitable contributions, voluntary pensions, life insurance, and medical and education expenses. A standard deduction applies to individuals with very low income.

A deduction up to RUB 2 million is granted on the acquisition of real estate; the deduction is up to RUB 3 million for mortgage interest. Taxable income from the sale of property (except for immovable property) owned for less than three years may be decreased by expenses incurred, or by a minimum deduction of RUB 1 million (for immovable property owned for less than five years), and RUB 250,000 (for other property, except securities).

The minimum deduction applicable to the sale of nonresidential property is RUB 250,000.

Foreign tax relief – Foreign tax paid may be credited against Russian tax on the same income, but the credit is limited to the amount of Russian tax payable on the foreign income.

Compliance for individuals:

Tax year – Calendar year

Filing status – An individual’s tax return filing obligations depend on a number of factors; joint filing or assessment for spouses is not permitted.
Filing and payment – Tax on employment income is withheld by the employer and remitted to the tax authorities. In certain cases, individuals must report their income by filing a tax return no later than 30 April following the year of assessment, with any tax outstanding due by 15 July.

Foreign nationals leaving Russia must submit an exit tax return no later than one month before departure and pay any tax due within 15 days of the filing date.

Penalties – Penalties apply for noncompliance. No extensions are available.

Rulings – There is no system of rulings for individual taxpayers.

Dividends – Dividends paid to a foreign entity or to a nonresident individual are subject to a 15% withholding tax, unless the rate is reduced under a tax treaty. A reduced withholding tax rate of 5% applies until 2029 to dividends paid by a public (i.e., listed) international holding company to its foreign corporate shareholders. Dividends paid to resident entities and individuals generally are subject to a 13% final withholding tax. The rate is 0% on dividends paid to domestic entities where the participation exemption applies (see “Participation exemption,” under “Corporate income tax,” above).

Interest – Interest paid to a nonresident legal entity is subject to a 20% withholding tax, unless the rate is reduced under a tax treaty. Russian companies are exempt from the withholding obligation on Russian-source income of foreign legal entities within Eurobond-like structures, under certain conditions. Interest paid to nonresident individuals is subject to a 30% withholding tax, unless the rate is reduced under a tax treaty. Interest paid to resident companies is not subject to withholding tax. Interest paid to resident individuals generally is subject to a 13% final withholding tax, although in certain circumstances the tax is not withheld at source but is payable by the individual after submission of the annual individual tax return.

Royalties – Royalties paid to nonresident legal entities and individuals are subject to withholding tax at 20% and 30%, respectively, unless the rate is reduced under a tax treaty. Royalties paid to resident legal entities are not subject to withholding tax. Royalties paid to resident individuals generally are subject to a 13% final withholding tax, although in certain circumstances the tax is not withheld at source but is payable by the individual after submission of the annual individual tax return.

Fees for technical services – Russia generally does not impose withholding tax on fees for technical services.

Branch remittance tax – There is no branch remittance tax.

Other – Other Russian-source payments made to a foreign company may be subject to withholding tax at various rates.
Anti-avoidance rules:

Transfer pricing – Comprehensive transfer pricing rules apply and are substantially in line with OECD principles. Acceptable transfer pricing methods are the comparable uncontrolled price method, the resale price method, the cost plus method, the comparable profits method, and the profit split method.

Transfer pricing documentation requirements apply (see also below under “Disclosure requirements”). Advance pricing agreements are available.

Interest deduction limitations – The thin capitalization rules restrict the deductibility of interest on loans granted or guaranteed by foreign affiliates with a direct or indirect participation in the taxpayer, and entities (both Russian and foreign) affiliated with such foreign affiliates.

Loans from Russian affiliates, loans to finance investment projects, and loans from nonaffiliated banks guaranteed by Russian affiliates, may be exempt from the thin capitalization rules subject to certain conditions. The thin capitalization rules apply where the debt-to-equity ratio exceeds 3:1 (12.5:1 for banks and leasing companies). Excess interest is nondeductible by the borrower for Russian profit tax purposes and is reclassified as a dividend distribution, subject to dividend withholding tax.

Controlled foreign companies – A Russian entity or individual is taxed on the undistributed profits of a CFC at a rate of 20% or 13%, respectively. The CFC provisions are applicable where an entity or an individual that is considered a Russian tax resident has an interest of more than 25% (10%, if more than 50% is owned, directly or indirectly, by Russian tax residents) in a nonresident entity.

A threshold exemption for inclusion of a CFC’s undistributed profits in the tax base of a Russian entity or individual is set at RUB 10 million.

Where the CFC rules apply, the relevant profits of the CFC are computed based on its standalone financial statements if at least one of the following conditions is satisfied:

- The auditor’s opinion with respect to the CFC’s financial statements is presented and the opinion is not negative, and the auditor does not refuse to express this opinion; and/or
- The CFC is a tax resident in a country that has concluded a tax treaty with Russia, and the country exchanges information with Russia.

If the conditions for computing a CFC’s profits based on its financial statements are not satisfied, the CFC’s profits must be computed in accordance with the general Russian tax rules. In addition, the general rules can be used at the taxpayer’s discretion (this approach, if chosen, must be used for five consecutive tax periods).

Hybrids – There is no anti-hybrid legislation.

Economic substance requirements – There are no economic substance requirements.

Disclosure requirements – Certain information must be disclosed to the tax agent with respect to persons exercising rights to certain securities issued by Russian entities and accounted for in the depositary account of a foreign nominee holder (including certain types of shares and bonds), foreign authorized holder, or depositary program. This information may be made available to the tax authorities in some cases. Where the information is not disclosed, a 30% withholding tax may be applied to the income derived from such securities (except dividends).

Russian tax residents are required to notify the Russian tax authorities of the following:

- A direct and/or indirect participation in a foreign company if the participation exceeds 10%;
- The establishment of a foreign structure that is not a legal entity; and
• Any interest in a CFC in which Russian tax residents exercise control.

In addition, foreign entities owning immovable property in Russia that is subject to property tax are required to disclose information regarding their direct and indirect shareholders to the Russian tax authorities.

Legal entities must determine and maintain information on their ultimate beneficial owners and update the data annually under Russian anti-money laundering legislation.

Russia has committed to the automatic exchange of information under the common reporting standard.

Non-Russian financial institutions are required to report certain information to the tax authorities on Russian account holders on an annual basis (i.e., “Russian FATCA”).

Russia has adopted the three-tiered approach to transfer pricing documentation (i.e., the local file, master file, and CbC report) for large multinational groups.

Exit tax – There is no exit tax applicable to corporations or individuals in Russia.

General anti-avoidance rule – There is a concept of “limits of the taxpayer’s rights when calculating the tax base” within article 54.1 of the Russian Tax Code that is intended to identify unjustified tax benefits. Generally, a taxpayer may be entitled to a tax benefit only if obtaining such a benefit is not the primary purpose of the transaction, and there is no misrepresentation of business operations, or taxable assets of the taxpayer that will lead to underpayment of taxes.

Value added tax:

Taxable transactions – VAT is levied on the sale of goods, the provision of services deemed to be supplied in the Russian territory, the transfer of property rights, and the import of goods.

Rates – The standard VAT rate is 20%; reduced rates of 10% and 0% may apply in certain circumstances (e.g., the export of goods).

Registration – A foreign entity cannot register for VAT purposes only; general tax registration is applicable for all taxes. Foreign entities providing e-services that are deemed to be supplied in Russia to both private and business customers, as well as related foreign intermediaries, must register for tax purposes, and account for and pay any relevant VAT.

Filing and payment – The general VAT return is filed on a quarterly basis. Payments are made in three equal monthly installments and are due no later than the 25th calendar day of each of the three consecutive months following the reporting quarter (with certain exceptions, e.g., reverse charge VAT and VAT payable by foreign suppliers of e-services).

Other taxes on corporations and individuals:

Unless otherwise stated, the taxes in this section apply both to companies and individuals and are imposed at the national level.
Social security contributions – The employer is required to make pay-related contributions for pension, social, and medical insurance. The tax authorities administer most types of social security payment. The contribution rates for 2020 are as follows: (i) pension contributions - 22% of an employee’s remuneration up to RUB 1,292,000, plus 10% of amounts exceeding this cap; (ii) social insurance contributions - 2.9% of an employee’s remuneration up to RUB 912,000 (the rate is 1.8% of an employee’s remuneration in the case of foreign nationals in Russia on a temporary basis); and (iii) medical insurance - 5.1% of the full remuneration.

Mandatory accident insurance contributions are paid separately from the above insurance contributions to the Social Insurance Fund, at rates ranging from 0.2% to 8.5% of the full amount of an individual's employment income, depending on the degree of inherent risk in the employee’s occupation.

Income earned by foreign employees hired under the highly qualified specialist regime is exempt from social security contributions (only accident insurance contributions are due).

Most foreign nationals, including citizens of the EAEU are subject to the same contributions as Russian nationals.

Employees are not required to pay social security contributions in Russia but self-employed individuals must make their own contributions.

Payroll tax – There is no payroll tax as such but Russian employers, as well as branches and representative offices of foreign entities established in accordance with the Russian law, are required to withhold personal income tax on the income paid to individuals.

Real property tax – Property tax for corporations is a regional tax, with rates established by the regional authorities (as well as tax exemptions not directly provided in the tax code). The tax applies to immovable fixed assets, excluding land (which is subject to land tax). The tax base generally is calculated based on the depreciated book value of the assets as of the balance sheet date, and the tax rate for the property cannot exceed 2.2%. For certain types of administrative, business, and trading premises, real estate owned by foreign companies and not allocated to a permanent establishment in Russia, and certain other premises, the tax base is the cadastral value of the real estate, and the tax rate for the property cannot exceed 2%.

Property tax for individuals is a municipal tax, governed by local regulations and the Tax Code. The tax rate is established by the local authorities annually at rates ranging from 0.1% to 2% of the cadastral value or the total inventory value, adjusted by a "deflator" coefficient.

Individuals also are required to pay land tax, imposed at the municipal level at rates set by the local authorities. Under the Tax Code, the rate may not exceed 0.3% of the cadastral value of land that is used for agricultural purposes and dwellings, and 1.5% of the cadastral value of other land. The tax base is the cadastral value of the land as determined under the land legislation.

Stamp duty – Stamp duty may be levied on certain transactions and documents, but usually is nominal.

Russia does not impose capital duty, transfer tax, a net wealth or net worth tax, or an inheritance or estate tax.

Tax treaties: Russia has concluded more than 80 income tax treaties. The OECD multilateral instrument (MLI) entered into force for Russia on 1 October 2019. For further information on Russia’s tax treaty network, visit Deloitte International Tax Source.
