CFO Vision, a conference bringing together the CFOs of many of Japan's top companies, is returning for its 2018 edition. We would like to take this opportunity to show our deep gratitude for your continuous and most generous support. Followings are the details of this year's conference.

The aim of the CFO Vision conference, being held under the principle of inspiring “The sustained growth of Japanese companies,” is to engage the CFOs of Japan's leading companies in thinking about how they can survive in an increasingly intensifying business environment. We had 185 representatives from 122 companies in the CFO Vision conference last year, providing a venue for active discussion and networking among participants. The conference has also been rated very highly by participants in past years.

The theme for the 2018 edition, which will be the sixth CFO Vision conference, is “Inclusive Growth: Corporate growth and co-existence with society” (tentative title).

Inclusive growth, a way of thinking which emphasizes that economic growth should be accompanied by consideration for the environment and society, has been actively debated at conferences such as the World Economic Forum in Davos. In the realm of corporate management, however, concern for the natural and working environments has, until now, been thought of mainly as something leading to cost increases. This situation has changed in recent years, due to the rapid development of digital technology such as robotics, AI, and IoT (so called “the fourth industrial revolution” technologies) that would lead to reduction in costs, with a shift toward appropriate investment. Together with our participating CFOs—the strategists of corporate management— this conference will seek to seize the opportunities of the fourth industrial revolution, and discuss how to achieve inclusive corporate management and aim for inclusive growth.

While we appreciate that you are all very busy, we hope you will find time for this opportunity.
