The Italian Business Community looks to innovation

On Tuesday 1 December, Deloitte Luxembourg organized the seventh edition of their annual forum for the Italian business community in Luxembourg, in collaboration with the Italian Chamber of Commerce in Luxembourg and Bocconi Alumni Association. The conference, which this year zoomed in on innovation, brought together around 90 representatives from the local, Italian-speaking business community to a noteworthy evening at Mudam. H.E. Stefano Maria Cacciaguerra Ranghieri, the Italian Ambassador to Luxembourg, gave the opening address.

Innovation and regulations

“In the current environment of changing regulatory and business challenges, Luxembourg continues to offer opportunities to diversify and grow the financial sector, and represents a fertile field for Italian business players,” comments Marco Crosetto, Audit Partner at Deloitte Luxembourg and a leading figure in the firm’s Italian Business Community.

The keynote speakers of this year’s conference included Marco Gay (Vice President of Confindustria and President of the Young Italian Entrepreneurs Association) and Roberto Minetti (Member of the Board of Directors of the Young Italian Entrepreneurs Association), who both highlighted innovation and the importance of open-innovation and start-ups in the current economic environment.

True to tradition, the conference also offered the participants a thorough fiscal update from an Italian, Luxembourg and international perspectives. The main changes in the context of the IV AML Directive, the responsibilities for the depositary bank under UCITS V and the features of the unregulated investment fund expected to be introduced into Luxembourg laws shortly, were amongst the main topics covered.

The conference represented once again a great opportunity for the Italian business community in Luxembourg to share their experiences, best practices and discuss the current and future business challenges.

Son Excellence Stefano Maria Cacciaguerra Ranghieri, Ambassadeur d'Italie au Luxembourg, a prononcé le discours d'ouverture.

Innovation et réglementations

« Dans l'actuel environnement fait de réglementations changeantes et de défis professionnels, le Luxembourg continue à offrir des opportunités de diversification et de croissance pour le secteur financier, et représente un champ fertile pour les acteurs économiques italiens », a commenté Marco Crossetto, Audit Partner chez Deloitte Luxembourg et figure importante de la communauté professionnelle italienne de l'entreprise.

Parmi les principaux orateurs de cette édition, citons Marco Gay (Vice-président de Confindustria et Président de l'Association des jeunes Entrepreneurs italiens) et Roberto Minetti (Membre du Directoire de l'Association des jeunes Entrepreneurs italiens), qui ont tous deux mis en avant l'innovation ainsi que l'importance de l'innovation ouverte et des startups dans l'environnement économique actuel.

Fidèle à la tradition, la conférence a également offert aux participants une mise à jour fiscale approfondie du point de vue italien, luxembourgeois et international. Les thèmes couverts incluaient les principaux changements de contexte de la 4ème Directive anti-blanchiment, les responsabilités de la banque dépositaire sous UCITS V et les caractéristiques du fonds d'investissement non réglementé qu'intégreront prochainement les lois luxembourgeoises.
