2021 Millennial and Gen Z Survey

A call for accountability and action | Mexico

Methodology and global key messages

Our methodology:

The 10th annual Millennial Survey solicited the views of 14.6K millennials and 8.2K Gen Zs (22,928 respondents total) from 45 countries around the world.

For the first time, we surveyed Gen Zs in all countries where we conducted fieldwork, including in 25 geographies where we had previously only surveyed millennials. As a result, year-over-year comparisons for Gen Zs are not yet always possible.

Fieldwork was completed between 8 January and 18 February 2021.

Millennials included in the study were born between January 1983 and December 1994. Gen Z respondents were born between January 1995 and December 2003.

Key findings:

Millennials and Gen Zs believe the world is at a tipping point on environmental issues, inequality, and racism. They are holding themselves and institutions accountable in order to bring about a more sustainable and equitable world. This year's survey unearths the following global insights:

The environment remains a top concern. During the pandemic, health care and unemployment topped millennials' list of concerns. But environment remained a priority (#3 for millennials and #1 for Gen Zs). ~40% believe that more people will commit to take action on environmental issues after the pandemic. But 60% fear business' commitment to helping combat climate change will be less of a priority as business leaders reckon with challenges brought on by the pandemic.

Two-thirds of millennials (69%) and Gen Zs (66%) think wealth and income is unequally distributed. Many believe government intervention will be needed to drive change. Nearly a third have supported politicians who want to reduce income inequality. Roughly 60% said legislation to limit the pay gap between senior executives and employees would significantly help, as would requiring a livable wage. And more than half of respondents said universal basic income would help.

Millennials and Gen Zs believe discrimination is widespread, likely enabled by systemic racism. One in five respondents feel personally discriminated against "all the time" or frequently because of an aspect of their backgrounds. Six in 10 Gen Zs and 56% of millennials said systemic racism is widespread in general society. They believe Individuals and activists are doing the most to reduce systemic racism, while the education system, legal system, government and business falls short of their potential to drive change.

High stress levels are driven by concerns about finances, family welfare, and job prospects. Almost half of Gen Zs and four in 10 millennials said they feel stressed all or most of the time. About two-thirds of respondents agreed that they often worry about their personal financial situations. Their families' welfare was also a main cause of stress for millennials. Uncertainty about jobs/career prospects was top for Gen Zs.

Stress and anxiety are prevalent in the workplace, and employers' efforts to support mental health are seen as inadequate. About a third of respondents (millennials 31%, Gen Zs 35%) said they've taken time off work due to stress caused by the pandemic. Yet about 40% have not felt comfortable disclosing the reason for their absence to their employer. Approximately 40% of millennials and Gen Zs feel their employers have done a poor job of supporting their mental well-being during the pandemic.

Views on business' social impact continues to decline; job loyalty slips. Continuing a steady decline over the last five years, less than half of millennials (47%) and Gen Zs (48%) think business is having a positive impact on society. This marks the first time these levels have fallen below 50% since this survey began in 2012. 62% of millennials agreed that businesses "have no ambition beyond wanting to make money." However, that figure is down slightly (four percentage points) from 2020. Job loyalty slipped from its 2020 peak. More millennials and Gen Zs would like to leave their employer within two years than last year—36% and 53% respectively, compared to 31% and 50% in 2020.

The following deck examines how Mexico's millennials and Gen Zs stand out from their global counterparts on these key themes.
