The employer's mandate

The roles of an employer have evolved significantly in recent years. Employers now have to be more accountable to the employees to comply with stringent regulations and procedures to avoid penalties and uphold corporate reputation. Human resources and finance professionals in organisations are critical support to the success of an employer. This seminar presented by the leaders of Deloitte and Talent Corporation seeks to align the understanding of both human resources and finance professionals of various issues that impact the organisation.

Our seminar will cover:

- Optimising corporate tax incentives for employees
- What authorities seek to unravel in a statutory employer's audits
- Latest updates on immigration rulings
- Responsibilities of the employer if the employee no longer files his tax return and relies on the employer's reporting
- The unknown corporate implication arising from employees who travel frequently

Who should attend

Heads of Human Resources, Human Resource Managers, Chief Financial Officers, Finance Managers
