

Business Simulation Learning

How to be in control of the company of the future?

Train to transform.

The world around us is changing rapidly and so are organizations. Current day trends are leading to a change in how companies are organized and this poses questions on how organizations can be controlled. Traditional approaches towards internal control will no longer fit. So how do you rethink your internal control approach and how do you kick-start your transformation?

Deloitte offers a unique 2-day business simulation learning experience that will kick-start the transformation of your internal control approach.

Business Simulation Learning

Train to transform.

Deloitte offers a unique 2-day business simulation learning that will kick-start the transformation of your internal control approach. The main goal is to anticipate current trends and changes in the marketplace and to start reflecting: how can you be in control of the company of the future?

This innovative training will ease the transition from a traditional internal control approach to one that fits future needs.

Meet Mondo

Mondo is an innovative, successful, start-up-like company whose product is an innovative health-tech solution that monitors your consumption of food and measures your nutritional needs. It has the following characteristics:

- Young, successful, start-up like;
- Founded on transparency and trust;
- Agile and lean;
- Refuses any kind of bureaucracy;
- Allergic to any kind of constraint or control.

The challenge

Mondo's struggle is to implement internal control without jeopardizing the unique strengths of the company. Clearly a traditional approach does not fit. But what does?

Simulation participants will face the challenge to develop an innovative approach for Mondo's internal control approach.

During the 2-day-training, they will meet Mondo stakeholders and be challenged to think outside of the box in order to come up with an innovative solution that fits Mondo's unique needs.

Our offer

We offer an innovative business simulation learning that will focus on developing both technical and soft skills.

The Mondo business simulation learning is led by seasoned professionals in the field of internal control as well as serious gaming and psychology.
