Plenary session: Transforming organizations What does it really take to transform an organization?

09:00-11:00

Track 1 - HR Transformation

HR organizations have been transforming themselves for years, making significant progress in reducing costs and improving operating effectiveness through HR system and process improvements, shared services, outsourcing and employee self-service. But that's just part of the value that HR Transformation can deliver. The next big step for HR is to help the business achieve its strategic objectives for performance and growth.

Track 2 - Digital Transformation

The gap between digital and physical no longer exists. Tomorrow is today. Customers today are connected to the entire planet, they are everywhere and always online, and expect to get quality service when they need it. The digital revolution is sweeping through the world, but many private and public sector organizations are struggling to keep up, mitigate risks and fully take advantage of the wealth of opportunities that exist.

Track 3 - Leading in Complex, International Organizations

It's time to rethink leadership. Opportunities and challenges now cross geographical, cultural and organizational boundaries, and leaders today need to deal with more complexity and ambiguity than ever before. How do we lead in complex, international organizations? How do we develop capabilities and share knowledge and get the most from our people when they sit in ten countries and speak eight languages?

11:00-11:30

Closing remarks
