

Dimensions of resilience

A framework for assessing household resilience

When faced with an unexpected challenge, whether economic, social or environmental, all households have a variety of potential resources to call upon in order to manage it.

To assess the resilience of households to shocks we need to consider all of these dimensions together, and understand how they interact with one another.