

Interview Tips

From preparation to follow up, we offer seven tips to ensure a strong interview

Do your homework

We're impressed when candidates have taken the time to do some research and learn about us. Take a look around and learn as much as you can. Being prepared will also minimize your anxiety.

Make an Impact

Dress for the occasion. It is appropriate to wear a business suit. If you mean business, show us. And remember...it's not always what you say, but how you present yourself that makes an impression. Be sure to shake hands firmly and maintain eye contact. During the interview, sit up and stay focused. If your mind starts to wander, it shows.

Be confident

Composure in the business world is crucial. And an interview is a good measurement of how you handle pressure. You don't want to appear too nervous. At the same time, don't be too relaxed. Maintain an appropriate level of professionalism without being unapproachable. The best advice is to be yourself. You're an outgoing, likeable person. Let that come through in your interview. We're looking for individuals who will thrive in our team-based environment.

Ask Questions

When you want to learn more about, who we are and what we do, it lets us know you're interested. Depending on what you ask, it may also prove you've done your homework before the interview.

Sell yourself

Your qualifications got you in the door. Make sure you can speak confidently about any experiences you've had in the classroom. Specific examples of how you've learned something exciting are of interest to us. We see potential in you, so be sure to sell yourself by promoting your skills and abilities.

Get clarification

If you don't understand a question, don't hesitate...ask us to repeat it. You have a better shot at giving your best answer if you know exactly what we're asking.

Follow up

It's good etiquette to thank interviewers for their time and ask about the process when it will be finalized. This will also let us know that you liked what you heard and you want us to keep you in mind.
