Key financial reporting questions

Key financial reporting questions

Below are certain key questions that financial executives should consider when assessing their organisation's financial reporting practices and the possible need for assistance in responding to the related challenges.

- Is a conversion to IFRS on your agenda, and do you have the resources to achieve this objective, ensuring consistent implementation throughout your organisation globally?
- Does your company have the know-how to implement newly issued or amended accounting standards?
- Are you planning a transaction that will involve new or challenging financial reporting requirements, and does your finance staff have the capability to fulfill these requirements?
- Do you have the in-house experience to address and comply with current regulatory requirements?
- Do you believe that your corporate accounting policies are consistently applied throughout your global organisation?
- Do you know whether new regulatory and accounting standards and interpretations are being appropriately applied throughout your organisation?
- Do you want to help your finance staff stay current with the latest accounting and financial reporting developments?
- Are you planning to streamline your global statutory reporting activities?
- Are you up to speed with the many requirements and challenges of raising capital in today's global markets?

Global reach and perspective

The Global IFRS and Offerings Services (GIOS) group consists of more than 200 member firm professionals located in key markets of Asia, Europe, and North and South America. This presence allows Deloitte to assemble global teams in a heartbeat.

The geographic and cultural experience of Deloitte professionals is diverse, many having lived and worked in numerous regions of the world, helping to ensure that the advice and perspective provided to our clients reflect a truly global view.

Deloitte's multidisciplinary capabilities are outstanding in the industry, and the GIOS professionals are adept at providing services that span the breadth of the issue at hand, involving the requisite resources of the Deloitte network whenever and wherever the need arises.

These advantages enable the GIOS group to provide customised services both on a local and global scale.

These services can vary from a one-time effort resulting in knowledge transfer to a company's organisation or long-term solutions. The group can call on deep, diverse, and industry-focused resources to tailor an approach that is comprehensive and fits your specific needs.

Navigating changing tides

In today's dynamic business and regulatory environment, companies face constant change in connection with their financial reporting.

Key business trends, such as the global movement toward International Financial Reporting Standards (IFRS), increasing levels of cross-border equity and debt offerings, and the shortage of finance resources and talent, are just some of the factors heightening this challenge.

Now more than ever, companies are looking for help in navigating the changing tides of today's reporting and offering environment.
