Hong Kong (HK)

Special COVID-19 testing arrangement for travellers departing HK by land from 21 March 2022

Government of the HK special administrative region | 19 March 2022

With effect from 21 March 2022, persons travelling to the Mainland or Macao by land (i.e., via Shenzhen Bay Port or the HK-Zhuhai-Macao Bridge HK Port), will be required to undergo a rapid polymerase chain reaction (PCR) nucleic acid test at the control points prior to their departure from HK. This is in addition to the existing requirement to present a negative result proof of a self-paid nucleic acid test issued within 48 hours by a recognised medical testing institution.

The Government will provide the aforementioned special testing service for free at the relevant control points, from one hour before the opening of the passenger clearance buildings until one hour before the closure of the passenger clearance buildings.

Travellers are advised to check the latest operating hours of the respective control points before embarking on their trips. For the Shenzhen Bay Control Point, operating hours for passenger clearance have been revised to 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. daily, with effect from 21 March 2022 until further notice.
