

Preparedness: Audit Readiness

Preparing for the future, now

Personal and corporate taxpayers alike continue to face heightened scrutiny from revenue authorities around the world. Authorities seek greater transparency and what they believe to be their jurisdiction's fair share of the tax pie, and they are using increasingly sophisticated technology and techniques to enforce tax laws and regulations.

In such an environment, a prudent step for taxpayers is to identify and prepare for potential examination risks, understand changing examination procedures, and navigate dispute resolution alternatives available to them if needed. Family offices are no exception; they should proactively incorporate such practices into their tax planning and compliance processes. For example, many family financial decisions, transactions and events can trigger revenue authority scrutiny. Proactive planning is important both to document the related tax positions and a strategy for defending them.

Leading practices

By conducting a periodic risk assessment, the family office can be effectively prepared for a tax examination if one takes place. Such risk assessments can range from a simple discussion with internal advisers to a detailed examination readiness assessment that includes document analysis, interviews, and other data gathering. The assessment can help the family office identify and quantify potentially material issues that may be a focus of an examination. In addition, it can help the family office develop and maintain a system for handling information requests that may be received from revenue authorities.

We can help the family office:

- Identify material issues which may become a focus on examination;
- Prepare for examination of these issues; and
- Develop and maintain a system for addressing potential revenue authority information requests.

Potential areas of examination

Audit readiness assessments can address a variety of potential issues associated with:
