

Report of Foreign Bank and Financial Accounts (“FBAR”)

Deloitte’s Global Information Reporting (“GIR”) practice is comprised of professionals with extensive tax technical knowledge and experience with process and technology, including capabilities specific to FBAR. We can work closely with you to assist in complying with your organization’s and your employees’ FBAR requirements.

Why now?

As evidenced by the implementation of the Foreign Account Tax Compliance Act (“FATCA”), offshore tax compliance is a top priority of the IRS. Accordingly, in the past several years, the IRS has increased its scrutiny to ensure increased attention towards FBAR compliance. Also, the Financial Crimes Enforcement Network (“FinCEN”) announced changes to FBAR compliance procedures last year.

- On September 30, 2013, FinCEN announced that FBARs must be electronically filed and that paper filings will no longer be accepted.

The new changes in FBAR compliance requirements and stricter enforcement make it even more important for organizations to identify their own filing requirements as well to provide information on a timely basis to impacted employees in order for them to comply with their requirements.

What is the impact?

- Individuals and organizations who have a direct or indirect interest in reportable foreign financial accounts must file an FBAR and comply with other tax reporting requirements for the accounts.
- Individuals who have signature authority over reportable accounts, including by virtue of their employment, must report that signature authority not only under the FBAR rules but also on their individual tax returns.
- For many taxpayers, the FBAR rules have created greater administrative and compliance burdens.
- Organizations may need to direct considerable resources to ensure compliance with the FBAR rules and regulations.
- Significant criminal and civil penalties exist for noncompliance.

Who can benefit?

- US multinational companies, with a wide global presence, across various industries, must file FBARs for their foreign accounts and will likely have employees subject to the FBAR reporting.
- Asset managers, hedge fund managers, and investment advisors with offshore funds and investments may have reporting obligations on their own behalf and additionally their employees may have reporting obligations for the offshore accounts of investments they manage.
