

Information Reporting & Withholding (“IRW”) Advisory

Deloitte’s Global Information Reporting (“GIR”) practice is comprised of professionals with extensive tax technical knowledge and experience with process and technology. Our IRW Advisory services will help you analyze the impact of Chapters 3, 4 and 61 of the Internal Revenue Code and assist with compliance of these rules.

Why now?

- Organizations often fail to address withholding and reporting requirements related to vendor payables, especially with respect to cross border payments.
- Recent transitional relief issued with respect to FATCA specifically excludes relief for non-compliance with the rules governing withholding and reporting in the vendor payable area.
- The Internal Revenue Service has made a significant investment in the enforcement of information reporting requirements and has increased penalties for failure to comply.

What is the impact?

- Non-compliance may create significant tax exposure. A withholding agent may be responsible for the entire withholding tax liability, up to 30 percent of amounts paid to non-resident aliens as well as penalties and interest.
- An organization that is not able to demonstrate compliance with Chapter 3 and 61 may not be able to show “good faith effort” with FATCA compliance.

Who can benefit?

- All US organizations that make payments to foreign and/or domestic payees and that are required to collect tax documentation, properly classify the character and source of the payments, and determine the amount of tax that might be withheld
- All foreign entities that receive payments from US sources must provide proper documentation in order to avoid withholding
- Types of payments that fall into this area include: dividends, interest, services, rents, royalties, fees, and freight
