

Tax Reform: Human Resources and Global Mobility

April 2017

Setting the tax reform stage

Tax reform is a top priority for President Trump and Republican leaders in Congress. Both groups have expressed a strong desire for significant changes to the current tax code and Republican control of both the Executive and Legislative branches of government may make reform a real possibility. In addition, there is a greater sense of urgency among congressional taxwriters given recent developments in the global tax landscape.

Both the Trump administration and the House GOP have put forth proposals for tax reform; although these proposals have important differences and lack a number of technical details, there appears to be quite a bit of agreement around key policy objectives. Specifically, both proposals include reducing corporate and individual tax rates, encouraging the on-shoring of jobs to the US, and repealing and replacing the Affordable Care Act (ACA). The potential impact of tax reform on US companies is a high priority issue and the impact of tax reform to HR and global mobility programs should not be overlooked.

Top considerations and planning for Human Resources and Global Mobility

Refreshing global mobility strategy

Changes to individual income tax rates could have a direct impact on the cost of global mobility programs for companies that apply a tax equalization policy. Lower US tax rates with no change in foreign tax rates will result in a rebalancing between hypothetical and actual taxes, thereby impacting overall tax reimbursement costs. Whether this change is an overall increase or decrease to a company's costs will depend on the mix of assignments into high-tax or low-tax countries. A holistic review of policies can help to ensure that the structure and costs of global mobility are in-line with the company's business needs.

Analyze impact of reduced tax rates on rewards programs

As corporate tax rates are reduced, deductions become less valuable and companies may realize additional benefit by accelerating deductions to a higher tax year. Employee benefit and rewards plans may present several opportunities to accelerate business deductions; for example, accelerating the accrual of bonus payments, pre-funding Voluntary Employees Beneficiary Association Plans (VEBAs), and reviewing equity plan arrangements coupled together with new accounting guidance (ASU 2016-09) present opportunities to take deductions in a higher-tax year. Companies should analyze the potential impact of reduced tax rates on their rewards programs and review opportunities to enhance corporate tax deductions.

Addressing timing around individual income inclusion relating to employee benefit and equity programs

In anticipation of potentially lower individual income tax rates, employees may be motivated to defer income to future tax years through delayed exercise of stock options or greater participation in deferred compensation programs. While the lower tax rates may present a tax planning opportunity for individuals, the increased deferral of income may also delay the corporate tax deductions related to that income, which could impact a company's ability to accelerate compensation deductions into a higher-tax year.

Monitoring changes to the Affordable Care Act

In March 2017, House Republicans introduced the American Health Care Act (AHCA) as a replacement for the ACA. This legislation ultimately was not brought to a vote and ACA remains in place. Republicans may introduce an alternative bill in the future, but the timing for doing so remains uncertain, as do the details of what would be included. ACA is still the law of the land and employers should continue to assess whether internal processes are adequate to determine the potential risk liability for each month of 2017 reporting. Identifying full-time employees for purposes of the employer mandate can be complex and employers could face a significant tax liability if this requirement is not satisfied.

Next steps

Tax reform is a rapidly-evolving area. Deloitte Tax LLP's Global Employer Services group will continue to publish updates as the legislative process progresses and new developments emerge. In the meantime, companies can begin to conduct impact analyses to assess the potential cost of these changes to their global mobility and rewards programs and analyze potential cash tax savings that could be realized through acceleration of corporate tax deductions related to employee benefit plans.

This document contains general information only and Deloitte is not, by means of this document, rendering accounting, business, financial, investment, legal, tax, or other professional advice or services. This document is not a substitute for such professional advice or services, nor should it be used as a basis for any decision or action that may affect your business. Before making any decision or taking any action that may affect your business, you should consult a qualified professional advisor. Deloitte shall not be responsible for any loss sustained by any person who relies on this document.

About Deloitte

Deloitte refers to one or more of Deloitte Touche Tohmatsu Limited, a UK private company limited by guarantee ("DTTL"), its network of member firms, and their related entities. DTTL and each of its member firms are legally separate and independent entities. DTTL (also referred to as "Deloitte Global") does not provide services to clients. In the United States, Deloitte refers to one or more of the US member firms of DTTL, their related entities that operate using the "Deloitte" name in the United States and their respective affiliates. Certain services may not be available to attest clients under the rules and regulations of public accounting. Please see www.deloitte.com/about to learn more about our global network of member firms.