As more and more companies move to the cloud, they're reaping the enormous benefits of always-on technology, rapid solution deployment, and flexible scaling. However, organizations are also coming up against a harsh reality: the journey to the cloud doesn't end when they go live with a new or migrated cloud application. In fact, enterprises are quickly discovering that cloud operations require a very different approach.

Before moving to the cloud, most companies were able to purchase supplementary services from their data providers that covered such critical tasks as controls management, security, patching, and monitoring. In contrast, cloud providers promote a shared responsibility model in which they offer the infrastructure, while their clients are responsible for the rest. That’s a tall order. It calls for a close integration of people, process, and technology, and it can be extremely time-consuming.

But it doesn’t have to be. Deloitte’s Cloud Managed Services (CMS) can help you design, build, and operate end to end client solutions in addition to managing critical business applications running in the cloud. Deloitte has also built OpenCloud, a platform that automates and accelerates our best practices in seven multi-disciplinary areas that are designed and customized based on the client’s needs.

Cloud Managed Services can help Deloitte clients by simplifying the management of existing and new cloud footprints.
Two flavors of Deloitte CMS

Deloitte CMS can be delivered in two different ways, giving our clients significant flexibility:

Client cloud management platform

- Root account
  - Owned by client
- Build
  - Longer build, configuration, and deployment time due to lack of pre-existing infrastructure and automated scripts
- Support and services
  - Customized set of managed and enterprise-grade security services delivered using client’s own cloud management platform and support processes
  - Round-the-clock support and incident remediation from Deloitte’s worldwide delivery team

Deloitte OpenCloud platform

- Root account
  - Owned by Deloitte; billed to client
- Build
  - Library of automated playbooks built by Deloitte and available to help accelerate the time to build and configure new client’s environments
- Support and services
  - Integrated suite of managed and security services available on demand and delivered using the Deloitte OpenCloud Platform and support processes
  - Round-the-clock support and incident remediation from Deloitte’s worldwide delivery team
