

ConnectMe™

Employee Experience Reimagined
for the Digital Workplace

Businesses work hard to make their customer experience seamless—delivering great service at every step of the journey. Why should it be any different for your employees?

Despite the progress organizations have made in improving the HR systems that employees use to manage their lives at work, a fundamental challenge remains: across these systems, there is no unified experience that places employees at the center. Beginning with the anticipation employees feel at the start of their first job, ending with the mixed emotions they feel as they plan for retirement, and continuing through all the milestones in between — these are the moments that matter. Each of these moments can be an opportunity for a business to deliver the same level of service they give to their customers.

ConnectMe™ creates a single destination site for HR services that connects employees to what matters most to them—wherever they are. It leverages existing HR technology investments to deliver an intuitive, contextualized, self-service interface with personalized HR and social collaboration content.

How ConnectMe helps with the moments that matter

ConnectMe improves the value of your existing HR technologies by pulling them together into one personalized space to deliver an integrated solution to support management of the employment life cycle. Designed with employees in mind, ConnectMe can also make life easier for HR teams by streamlining and simplifying the way HR services are delivered. So while the engine behind the scenes works hard to personalize content and provide useful recommendations, all the employee sees is what matters most to them.
