Agenda

Evaluating the current state of financial planning and analysis (FP&A)

FP&A becoming a business partner

The Kimberly-Clark experience

Discussion/Q&A: barriers, goals, and achievements

Our group today

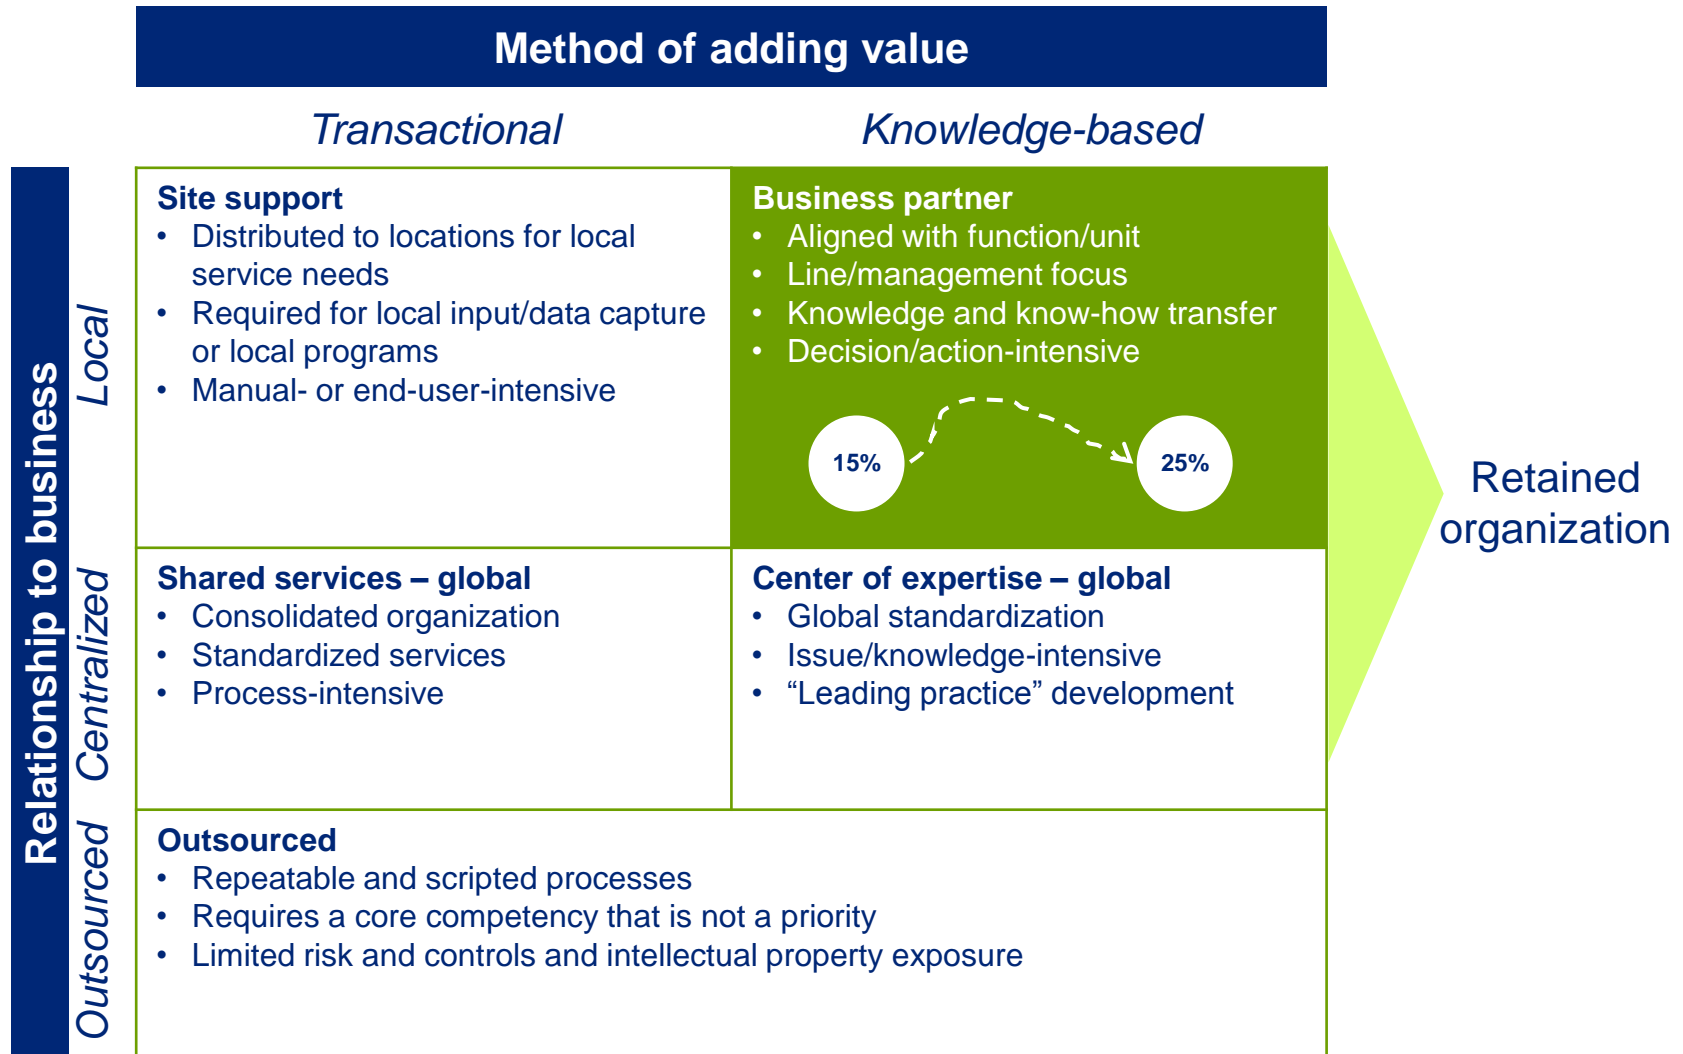

1 How much of your FP&A team's time is spent on the following activities?

- Corporate financial planning/forecasting/budgeting and IR support
- Report creation
- Corporate decision support — M&A, corporate strategy, or other corporate decisions
- Business unit or functional (operations) decision support

2 Have you explored shared services/center of excellence for FP&A?

3 Do you believe you have automation opportunities (e.g., too many spreadsheets in your processes)?

The journey to an effective finance function positions the retained organization to be a strategic business partner.

The outcome is an increase in capacity, capability, and collaboration.

Four Faces of FP&A

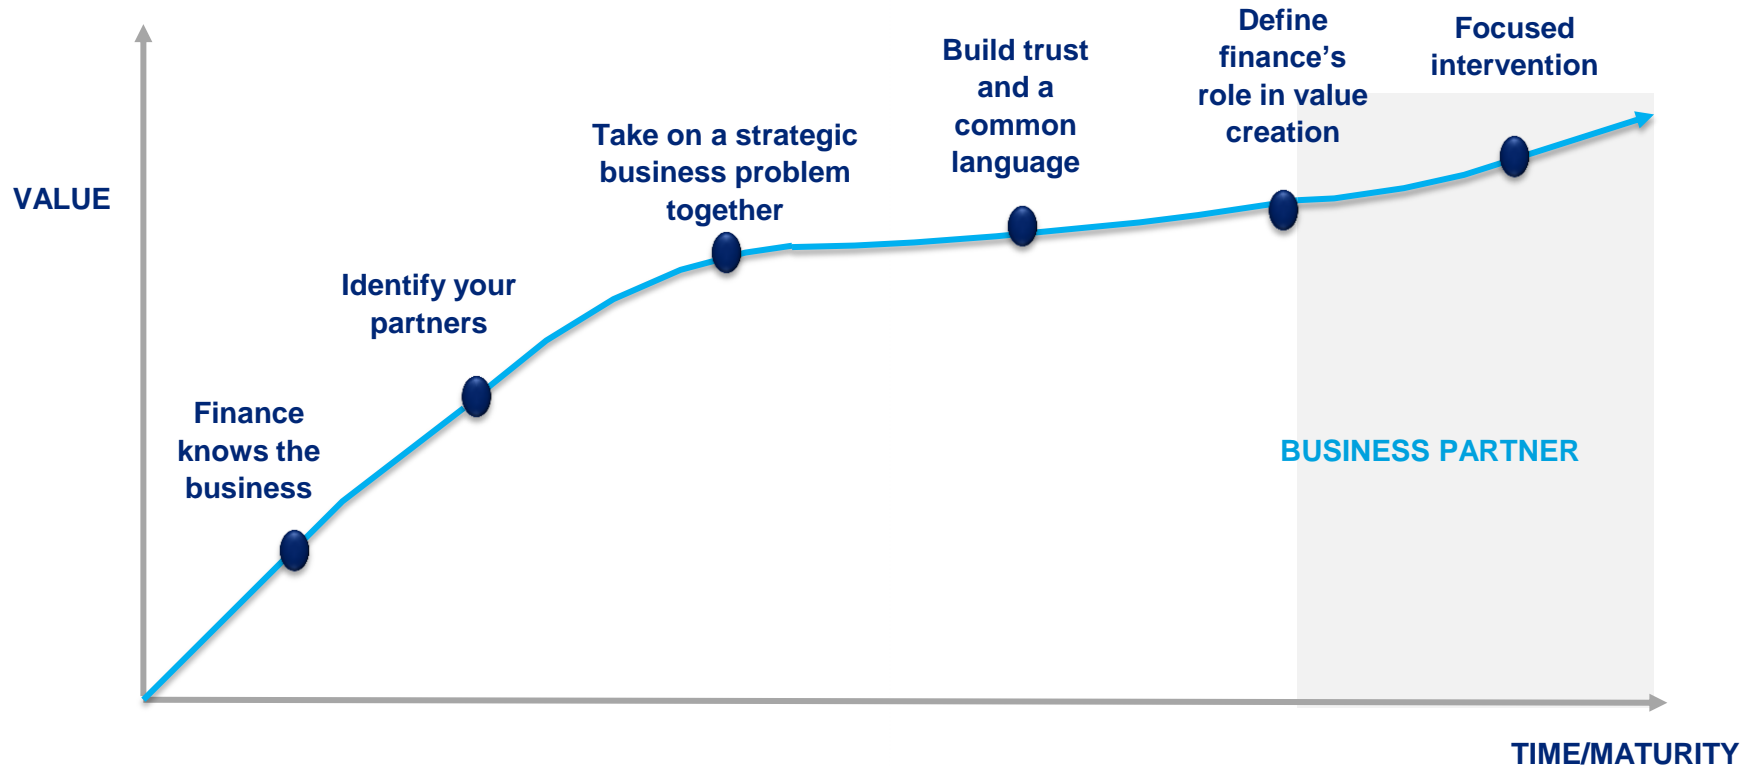

In which quadrants does your organization spend most of its time now?

Where would you like to spend your time in the future?

What will you do more of and less of to achieve this vision?

Do you have the right people?

Not everyone is in the same place. There are tactical steps you can take immediately.

Business partnering, what do you mean?

“Business partnering” is often used very differently across companies

How finance works

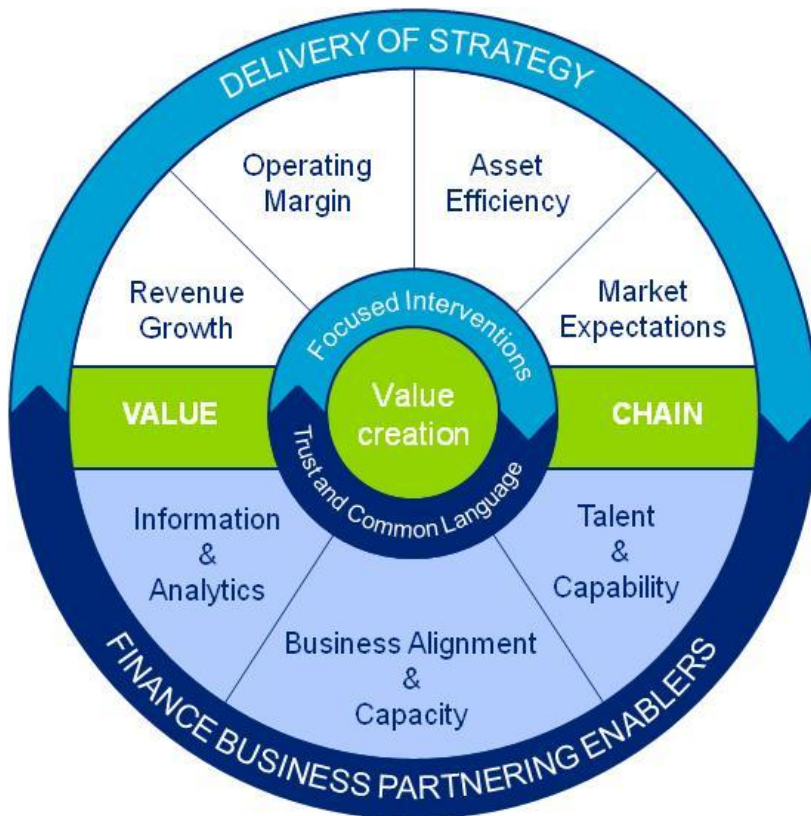

- Communication
- Responsiveness
- Exhibit knowledge of the business, not our specialty
- Forward deployed
- Available to serve

What finance does

- Non-traditional finance
- Operational decision support
- Leadership

The Deloitte business partnering framework has a focus on driving value.

The framework identifies focused interventions that allow finance business partners to create value for the business with the support of key FBP enablers.

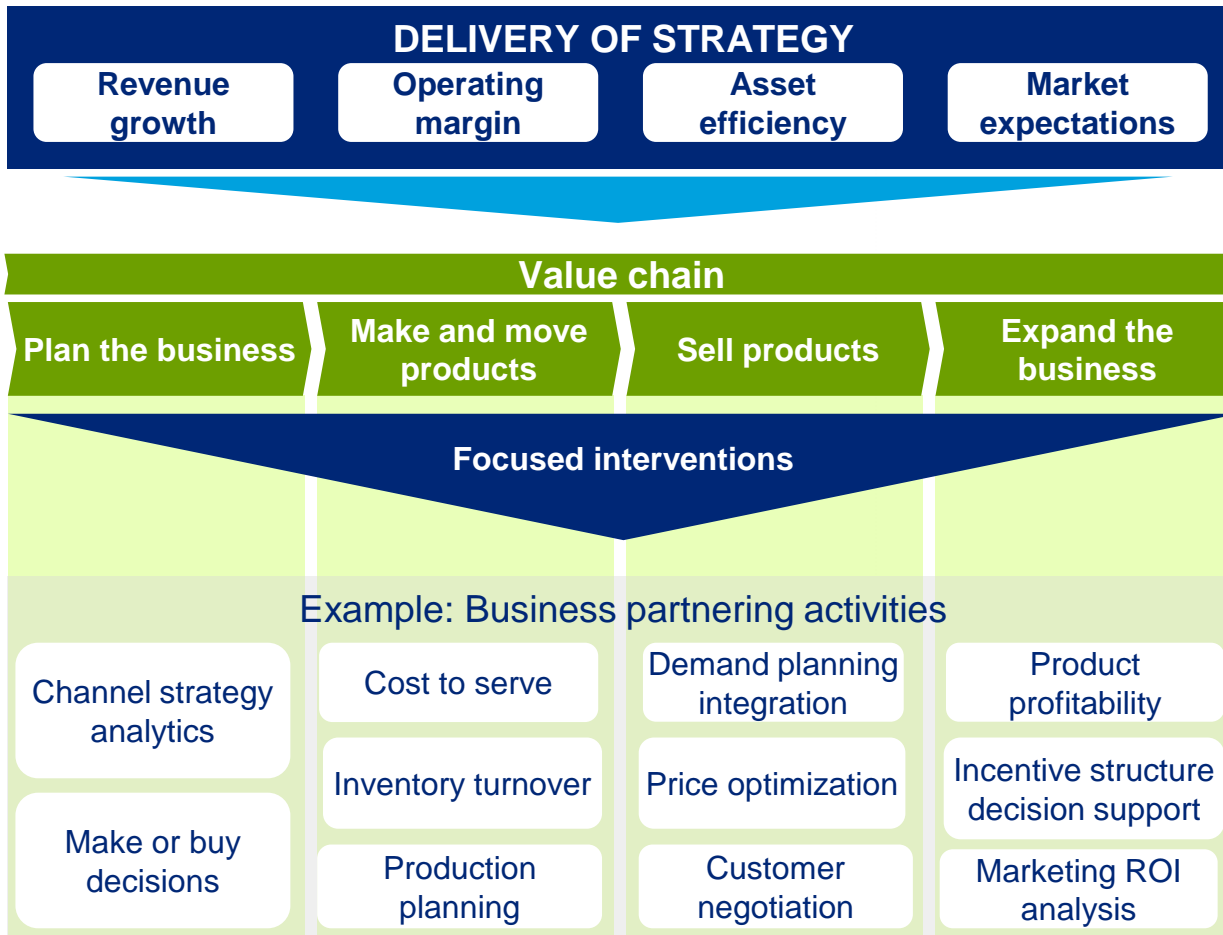

Delivery of Strategy

- Ways in which business partners can add value
- Become a “player” not a “scorekeeper”
- Add significant value to an organization and unlock opportunities

FBP Enablers

- Required to effectively deliver desired business partner activities
- Key to empowering the finance function to deliver these value-added activities

Identifying the interventions that generate value

Working with their business counterparts across the value chain, finance can agree and prioritize the activities that will have the greatest impact.

Characteristics of the right partner

Finding a counterpart who wants support and a process that needs it are important to successfully engaging

Rocky soil

- Ad hoc decision process
- Limited data
- Leaders value “gut”/experience

Fertile ground

- Structured process
- Data available for analysis
- Willing/interested business leader
