

The Risk Council

Exchange Ideas. Solve Problems.

Introduction

Navigating today's energy and commodities industries presents many complex risk and regulatory hurdles that challenge even the most seasoned executives.

Enter Deloitte's Risk Council (the Council), an industry forum for leaders in the commodity transacting and regulatory risk segments to gather, connect, share thoughts, and develop solutions that address current industry challenges. The mission of the Council is simple: It seeks to identify, discuss, and develop leading practices that address key problems facing the energy and commodities industries through the exchange of ideas in a roundtable forum.

Participation Details

Participants in the Council are industry thought leaders who value open discussion, points of view, and innovation through collaboration. These executives have many years of combined experience addressing risk, regulatory, and compliance issues that confront companies transacting in commodities.

Benefits

Participants in the Risk Council benefit by:

- Representing the interests of their companies in the development of benchmarks and leading practices.
- Being a driving force that generates thought leadership discussing risk and regulatory topics.

The energy and commodities transacting industries pose complex risk and regulatory challenges that test the experience of even the most seasoned executives. The Risk Council provides industry leaders with a venue to share experiences and collaborate on solutions.

- Learning about current issues from knowledgeable participants and guests including regulators, vendors, educators, and specialists.
- Networking with other leaders in the commodities transacting sector.
- Collaborating via committees on the development of thought leadership.
- Strengthening their voice in the market.

Meetings

The Risk Council hosts four sessions annually at various locations both in Houston and in Washington, D.C. At least two of these meetings are held in Deloitte's offices, which includes meetings at our Deloitte Center for Energy Solutions in Houston. Other sessions may be hosted at the offices of our participants.

Given the velocity at which the risk and regulatory environments change, the Risk Council, at times, will hold dialogues between sessions to facilitate discussion of pertinent topics and encourage participant engagement.

Participants have the opportunity to participate on various committees that facilitate surveys and collaborate on the development of thought leadership.

The agendas for both the in-person and remote sessions are driven largely by participant input as well as current industry topics and challenges.

Thought Leadership

In addition to connecting with others in the industry, participants have the opportunity to participate on various committees that facilitate surveys and collaborate on the development of thought leadership. These documents are hosted on a secure web portal with restricted access.
