

Resilient podcast: Future of Trust

Episode 2: What is the future of trust if we don't trust each other?

Host:

Don Fancher, Principal, Deloitte Risk & Financial Advisory

Guest:

Martha Minow, Harvard Law School professor

Don Fancher: Welcome to Resilient. I'm Don Fancher, the Global Leader for Deloitte's Forensic Practice and I get to be the host for this Resilient podcast series on the Future of Trust.

And in this series, we are talking to leaders like you who are on the front line of building, maintaining, and even, in some cases, defending trust in their organizations. We'll continue to explore what it means for leaders and institutions to strike the balance of transparency and mutual benefit of stakeholders, and how that influences actions that leaders can take to build trust.

In today's episode, I'm joined by a legal leader with an incredible story to tell.

Martha Minow is a Harvard Law School professor and the former dean of Harvard Law School. She's been a CEO and a litigator. She's served on a board directors, and she's also been a UN Commission Chair. And for over 40 years Martha has been shaping legal minds, advancing the profession, influencing legislation, and she has even worked with country leaders to help advance policies and conflict resolution where trust was desperately needed.

Martha Minow: You know, trust is fundamentally belief in the reliability or truth of a person or a thing or an institution.... I think that really its reliability in delivering what it promises, or what the person promises but also preventing betrayals-- intentional or unintentional.

Don Fancher: During our conversation we're going to also hear more about her new book, Saving the News, which digs deep into how the government, social media, and technology are the shaping media in the United States. We are going to discussed the kinds of initiatives needed if the First Amendment guarantee of freedom of the press continues to hold meaning in the twenty-first century.

For the full episode, follow Resilient on Apple podcasts, SoundCloud, Stitcher, Amazon music, Spotify, or wherever you listen to podcasts.

Until next time, stay safe and remain resilient.

This podcast contains general information only and Deloitte is not, by means of this podcast, rendering accounting, business, financial, investment, legal, tax, or other professional advice or services. This podcast is not a substitute for such professional advice or services, nor should it be used as a basis for any decision or action that may affect your business. Before making any decision or taking any action that may affect your business, you should consult a qualified professional adviser. Deloitte shall not be responsible for any loss sustained by any person who relies on this podcast.

About Deloitte

Deloitte refers to one or more of Deloitte Touche Tohmatsu Limited, a UK private company limited by guarantee ("DTTL"), its network of member firms, and their related entities. DTTL and each of its member firms are legally separate and independent entities. DTTL (also referred to as "Deloitte Global") does not provide services to clients. In the United States, Deloitte refers to one or more of the US member firms of DTTL, their related entities that operate using the "Deloitte" name in the United States, and their respective affiliates. Certain services may not be available to attest clients under the rules and regulations of public accounting. Please see www.deloitte.com/about to learn more about our global network of member firms.